The End.—A formidable rival to Dr. Cum ming has arisen in Australia, and has published a book containing the most dreadful prophecies, supported by incontrovertible passages of Scripture. His readers are informed that, contrary to common belief, the earth, instead of being orange-shape, has the shape of a pine-apple, and is elongated, instead of being flattened at the poles; that this elongation has got to such a pitch that the earth is about to change its centre of gravity; Rome is to be suddenly overwhelmed, and seen no more forever; and the whole nowhern hemisphere will share more or less that the trumendous disturbance. The dwellers on the north side of the equator are informed, however, that by emigrating immedialely to Austrolia they may escape the threatened catacissm, and, after it is over, return to enjoy the new earth, which is to be so pervaded with currents of magnetism and electricity that the soil will be fruitful beyond the power of the liveliest imagination to concuive, and man is to live as long as the oak of the forest. We doubt whether the terrors of the impending catastrophe, or even the cheerful prospect held out to the survivors, will largely affect emigration to the antipodes this year. The expounder of this theory is, however, so dreadfully in carnest that he threatens to come out with another and bigger book next year supported by

THE STORM.—The southerly wind and rainy weather that we had in Honolulu, from Sept. 19th to Oct. 8th, prevailed throughout the group. The rains have been copious and abundant, and most favorable for plantation crops. There was not any heavy and damaging wind except on Kauai, where, on Saturday the 3d inst, it blew almost a hurricane, chopping all round the compass. At Lihne about $5,000 dollars damage was sustained in the breaking down of the cane in the fields. The water flume of Mr. G. Wilcox was thrown down. At Koloa, the sea swept away the wharf and caused other damage. The fury of the gale seemed to culminate around down, and the fine stone church building was extensively damaged. Two-thirds of the northern wall of the building fell, racking and straining the roof frame and otherwise damaging the whole structure. They killed the man at the wheel and the second mate at once, and drove the crew below. The captain and mate attempted to escape by jumping overboard from the cabin windows, having first thrown over some chairs, or other floating articles, but they were soon dispatched in the water, the wretches lowering a boat for that purpose. The owner, with dispatched in the water, the wretches lowering a boat for that purpose. The owner, with his revolver, making his stand in the cabin to sell his life as dearly as possible, kept them at bay, and finally was promised his life on condition of giving up his weapon. The crew, nine in number, were brought into the waist of the ship and lashed to a hawser, to which a kedge anchor was bent, and all were tumbled overboard, to perish beneath the water. Having accomplished their cruel design, and freed themselves of the officers and crew, they headed the ship out upon the broad Pacific Ocean, with the purpose of reaching China. With no knowledge of navigation, or the variation of the compass, and only the idea that they must stretch out westward to reach China, they stretch out westward to reach China, they brought up, after 73 days, among the Kurile Islands, passed through into the Ochotsk Sen, and got into the ice. They lay in the ice six days, and filled up their water-casks, having antifered greatly on the passage across having suffered greatly on the passage across from shortness of water. They still kept to the northward, widently having no distinct knowledge of where they were, and finally came to anchor off the "Sand-spit," in Northeast Gulf, on the 23d of April. THE CHINESE AMBASSADORS are unbending in the freedom of "the wild West," and being, doing and suffering in a remarkable way. The two Tajens are generally taken in hand by ladies and other gay persons and stripped, so to speak, of their old habits. Chili bears all this better than Sun. Both being at a ball at Niagara Falls, were importuned to dance, and Chili was almost persuaded, but the figure deterred him. He, however, pinned a lady's nosegay on bis hat, and looked very detonaire and festive. He is more adventurous than Sun, for he was the first man, not connected with the work, to cross the new Suspension Bridge over Niagara, at a tremendous height, in a little acup, drawn by pullies on wire cables. It was almost a Blondin feat. He has been useder the cataract and over it, and will tell of Niagara when he arrives at home. Sun looks more to his safety, and yet fate was near finding him out. At Tonawanda he went pottering about an old wharf, and fell through the flooring into the lake,—more like a rat than an Ambassador. But he was soon febred out, and is no doubt glad he is about to icave the West for the sedate chilization of oid Shawmut, and the casy stairs of the Bunker Hill Obelisk.—N. Y. Times.

TRAGEDY AT SEA.—By the Was Rotch, Capt. E. F. Nye, from the Ochotek Sea, we have accounts of the mutiny at sea of Chinamen, off the coast of Peru, and the horrid butchery of the officers and crew of the ship. The particulars, as far as Capt. Nye learned them, are as follows:

About the beginning of February last, a Peruvian bark left Callao for a port distant only two days' sail, having on board fifty Chinese, (who had been engaged for a plantation in that neighborhood;) and rice and other supplies for the plantation. The owner of the bark, with his Chinese servant, were passengers, and there was also $20,000 in specie on board.
